

Enforcement of alcohol policy questioned

Officers complain they can't enforce the law

Hugh Bouchelle
Flyer Staff Writer

The current university alcohol policy, which has students found guilty of underage drinking violations serving community service time in the dining facility is under scrutiny by the University administration and Public Safety. The SSU policy of administrative discipline is being weighed against a court citation for underage drinking on campus.

The option under consideration would be to begin issuing official citations (similar to a traffic tickets) to students found drinking underage on campus. This new procedure would place the responsibility for disciplining underage drinkers with the District Court in Salisbury instead of with the administration. For violators, it would mean a day in court and a possible fine of up to $500.

According to the Director of Public Safety Jim Phillips, some officers have voiced concern over the current policy of administrative discipline. The same violations in downtown Salisbury, if investigated by police, typically result in a citation being issued to the student. Other officers, however, have expressed a desire to keep the current policy, explaining that students typically receive harsher punishments under the current system.

Depending on the location of the offense, there are currently two ways of dealing with underage drinking on campus. If the student is found in the

The Crossroads is under Dining Services supervision. The Assistant Director is responsible for holding an administrative hearing and assigning penalties to violators at the Crossroads.

According to the SSU Student Handbook, violations of the University's Alcohol and Other Drug Policy may result in disciplinary probation for up to one year, referral to alcohol education resources, loss of campus housing, fines and disciplinary probation (first offense).

One student, who wished to remain anonymous, reported that they received a $25 fine and 10 hours community service to be performed at the University Dining Facility. According to this same source, the community service in the dining facility was not unusual and knew others who had received similar punishment.

The Interim Director of University Dining Facilities, Carmen DiSylvestro, was unable to give additional details of the administrative procedures he handles and referred questions to David Ganoe, Director of Guerrieri University Center. However, Ganoe did not return phone calls.

If an underage student is caught drinking on campus outside of the Crossroads (only a few last semester) the report goes to the Vice President of Alcohol violations at the Crossroads are handled differently than elsewhere on campus.

The policy is currently under review by Public Safety, which has already counseled with the Crossroads Advisory Committee, the staff for the Vice President of Student Affairs and the University Forum. A date for the final decision has not been set.

SSU senior ZeeBree Ezell Mollon, 22, was killed Monday, Jan. 26 when she was struck by a car in the parking lot of Giant on Rt. 13 while she was packing groceries into her car. Mollon was eight months pregnant at the time of the accident and her baby died as well.

Mollon was an elementary education major and psychology minor. The campus community was shaken by the tragic and sudden death of Mollon who was well-liked by those that knew her.

Senior Christel Phillip, Mollon's best friend for four years, described Mollon as optimistic, spiritual and a loving mother and wife. Mollon had recently married in September and was the mother of a 2-year-old girl.

Phillip, who witnessed the accident, said, "It happened so fast."

Dedra Campbell, a senior, said "I'm thankful for the time I had to know her." She emphasized the good memories she shared with Mollon. Campbell said Mollon was extremely energetic and funny.

Maisha Ellis, a junior, was very surprised by the news and said, "It is hard to accept in the minority community."

Debbie Johnson, advisor to the gospel choir, said Mollon had been an active member of the choir since her freshman year. Johnson was shocked at the news of Mollon's death since she had just seen her the Friday before the accident.

Johnson said the gospel choir rehearsal following the accident had a rejoicing tone to celebrate the memory of Mollon.

Phillip wanted others to focus on the good time and the joy of knowing Mollon. She said many students, faculty and alumni turned out for Mollon's funeral and she wished to thank the campus for their support.

Phillip said her professors, Carol Williamson, vice-president of student affairs, and SSU President Bill Merwin have all been very nice and

University patron Dorothy Henson dies at age 80

Mike Andersen
Flyer Staff Writer

Students and faculty returning to campus were immediately faced with the news that Dorothy W. Henson, 80, had passed away on Monday, Jan. 26, 1998.

SSU President Bill Merwin expressed his sadness for her passing. He said, "She's a loss for me personally for the friendship we've developed." He explained that visits with his wife, Debra, to the Hensons in their Florida home had fostered a warm relationship between the two families.

Dean of the Richard A. Henson School of Science and Technology, Thomas Jones, described her as "warm, gracious, grand, friendly, and caring." Jones said that even though his interaction with Dorothy Henson had been limited, he was in a unique position to witness the impact the Hensons have had on campus.

Jones recalled Richard Henson's endowment of $2.5 million for a school of science and technology in 1988, the year of his marriage to Mrs. Henson. Jones said that $36,000 from interest on the gift is used annually to fund scholarships between $2,000 and $3,000 for 16 SSU students. He said that the Hensons's commitment to SSU transcended the endowment, explaining that Richard Henson would annually come to SSU from his home in Florida to lunch with the students whose scholarships bear his name.

Merwin also said that the Hensons were loyal supporters of SSU. He concurred with Jones and said their "biggest single impact is the Henson scholars." But the scholarships, explained Merwin, are not the only reason why the Hensons are involved in the affairs of the university. He said that in addition to the scholarships, the new science building, to be completed in 2001, will bear the Henson name.

Dorothy Henson is survived by her two children, five grandchildren, several nieces and nephews and by her husband.

In lieu of flowers, Richard Henson has requested that memorial donations made be made in memory of his late wife to Hospice of Napes, Fla. or to the Ward Foundation of Salisbury, Md.

Local calls charged per minute for on-campus students

Students feel left out of the decision-making process

Rick Barnard
Flyer Staff Writer

Students now have to pay three cents per minute when making a local call, instead of a flat fee of 10 cents per call, after a decision was made last semester to change the way calls are billed.

According to John Morris, director of telecommunications at SSU, the change was necessary because the school was losing money under the old system. Bell Atlantic, the company which provides SSU's local phone service, classifies SSU as a business and has been charging the school three cents per minute for the last several years.

The average call lasted three minutes at the time, said Morris, who is responsible for tracking the lengths of calls, and charging students the flat fee usually resulted in a profit that was fed back into the telecommunications budget.

Last year, however, the average call jumped from three minutes to between 10 and 12 minutes. Morris believes the jump was due to students accessing the internet from their rooms for long periods of time, costing the school approximately 20 to 23 cents per call since it had to pay the difference.

Morris said that a decision was made last semester to begin charging students by the minute in order to cover costs but did not say how that decision was made or if students were involved in making the decision. Morris said that he believes it was the fairest thing to do since students are now responsible for paying for what they use.

Morris also said the rate change could have come sooner, but it was decided to wait until the RESNET system, which allows students access to the internet from their rooms, was up and running.

Ken Kundell, director of Information Technologies, said that about 250 students have signed up for the RESNET program this semester. He did not know if it had anything to do with the new phone rates.

The SGA is now looking into the matter. According to Jean Haddaway, SGA vice-president of student affairs, a computer sciences committee is looking at alternatives as well as student complaints that the new rate gives the school a monopoly on internet access by almost forcing students to join RESNET.

Despite a memo sent to students last semester, students do not know why the rate changed. Laura Young, a junior in Chesapeake Hall, thought the change was another way for the University to generate money. She said she feels it is a little awkward asking her off-campus friends to call her back. Another junior, Veena Narang of Chester Hall, was also unaware of why the school changed the rate but added that it does stop her from calling people off-campus for too long.

In the meantime, Morris said the new rate "should not hurt judicious students," and "may even help some save money." He also said that he will keep an eye on phone use over the next semester and if the average length drops back to three minutes SSU may switch back to the flat rate system. "If we can change it back," Morris said, "we will."

Punishment for alcohol violations called into question

Student Affairs and the offense is handled according to the Handbook policy stated above.

If the new policy were implemented, a student found drinking underage anywhere on campus would be issued a citation. State law sets the penalty for underage drinking at a fine of no more than $500. Sgt. Roberts of the Wicomico County Sheriff's Office, an experienced officer in this matter, said that the typical fine for underage drinking is nearly always less than the maximum, but it depends on the judgment of the court.

Phillips stated, "The Crossroads Club has been investigated by undercover officers of the Alcohol Licensing Board and no violations have been found." He also made the point that one big difference between on campus violations and downtown is that often an underage drinker downtown is simply kicked out of the bar, free to try again. While on campus, a report and action are taken.

DiSylvestro said that about 80 percent of the students at the club are underage and that most of them, "just want to dance, not get drunk or even drink." He wanted to stress that out of the few thousand that attended the club last semester, only a few violations occurred.

To drink at the Crossroads a student must present a student I.D. and driver's license at the door when they enter the club indicating they are 21 or over. Drinkers are given a wrist-band which must be turned in prior to leaving the club. Non-drinkers receive a large black "X" on the back of their hand when they enter the club.

The bartenders, door personnel and waitresses all look for violations of the drinking policy. Rovers are sent through the club at regular intervals to check for violations. This semester only one violation has been reported. Recently, at the club on a busy Saturday night, enforcement of the club rules were strict.

It is unknown at this time what effect, if any, a policy change would have on underage drinking or continued patronage of the Crossroads by students.

After last year's death of Louisiana State University student, Benjamin Wynn, of an alcohol overdose and the recent local media attention focused on the selling of alcohol to minors, it becomes understandable that so much attention is focused on the Crossroads Club and its possible effects on underage drinking in the community.

Professor Gering calls for removal of Snow Hill mayor

Brent Bozman
Flyer Staff Writer

History instructor George W. Gering Jr. is the spokesman for a group that has petitioned to recall Snow Hill, Md. Mayor Craig Johnson, who was charged on Dec. 23 with two counts of abuse of power; one for abusing his position as mayor and as Worcester County sheriff's deputy.

Police allege that Johnson gave access to a Worcester County Police squad car to Jon-David and Cherie Messner of Ocean Pines, Md. for use in a pornographic photo shoot that was later reproduced and distributed on the World Wide Web. Johnson will appear in Worcester County District Court at an unspecified date.

Gering, who served as Snow Hill mayor from 1978 to 1980, began the petition drive with other former Snow Hill mayors Ray Warren and Suzanne Knudsen.

"Leaving someone in office when they have been charged with a crime and ignoring it like it didn't happen does not speak well for a town," Gering said.

While any economic impact from the scandal has not yet been evident, publicity has spread quickly. Newspapers across the country and Time magazine have run articles on the story. Gering was interviewed by British Broadcasting Corporation radio for a report on Johnson.

The Flyer/ Erin Riesner
Dr. George Gering, SSU history professor and former mayor of Snow Hill, has organized a petition drive to oust Snow Hill mayor Craig Johnson.

Johnson's opponents were able to collect 360 signatures in nine days on the petition calling for a recall election, 100 more than the necessary 260 required. The election will be held Feb. 10.

"We had no problem finding people who objected to [Johnson staying in office]. This petition came together fairly quickly," said Gering.

In addition to widespread public support for Johnson's removal from office, two of Snow Hill's three city councilmen have also called for his resignation.

Johnson has not commented on the allegations pending his trial but he attempted to have the petition invalidated. Johnson said that Snow Hill Board of Elections member Robert Fisher should not have been allowed to collect signatures for the petition. Sixty-two of the signatures were invalidated, but the petition has remained valid.

"We created a buffer of 100 extra signatures just in case something like this came up," Gering said.

Gering, 72, moved to the Snow Hill area in 1975 after a 33 year career in the U.S. Air Force, where he rose to the rank of colonel.

Gering has served as a part time or full time contractual instructor of history at SSU from 1978 to 1991. Gering has been a full time history instructor at SSU since returning in 1993 after suffering a heart attack.

Despite his active role in the move against Johnson, Gering said he has no interest in serving as interim mayor if Johnson is forced out of office.

"It's time for some new blood in the Snow Hill government," Gering said.

Failure to close University puts faculty and students at risk

The last two weeks have seen powerful nor'easters tear through the Eastern Shore bringing widespread flooding and high winds. County schools and private schools in the area closed as newscasts advised viewers not to leave their homes unless they absolutely had to.

Unfortunately, SSU faculty, staff and students were forced to leave their homes both weeks due to the failure of the University to close. For a campus with more than two-thirds of its students living off-campus, this endangered many people who had to brave the severe weather to make it to class or report for duty.

Many faculty tell students not to risk personal safety when trying to decide whether or not to try and make it to class during inclement weather. However, strict attendance policies in some cases give students almost no choice.

In some instances, students are penalized if they miss more than two classes all semester and using an absence so early in the semester leaves students vulnerable in the case of an emergency or illness later in the semester.

The University's belated efforts last Wednesday to cancel all classes after 3 p.m. caused more problems. Some students were already on-campus for their full day of classes, some of which extend into the evening. Having already successfully made it through the storm, these students and faculty now had to run the risk of travelling again. Only this time it was during the storm's most severe weather.

Closing decisions need to be made earlier in the day, otherwise people are put in a situation of double jeopardy. Keeping schools open for the benefit of the 1,600 students that live on-campus is not worth putting nearly 5,000 commuters' lives at risk.

Phone policy change lacked student input

Unbeknownst to most students, a decision to bill on campus students per minute for local phone calls instead of charging the 10 cent flat fee was made last semester by Director of Telecommunications John Morris.

The only notification that students received was a memorandum at the bottom of the final phone records given to students during finals week last semester. SSU Junior Peter Smith met with Vice President of Student Affairs Carol Williamson to discuss the decision last semester. Smith said that Williamson wasn't aware of the change until he brought it to her attention. Williamson was unavailable for comment.

The lack of student input into this decision is disturbing. It is further alarming that Williamson, an administrator, was not informed of the policy change. The method of informing students of the change was also inadequate at best.

Another factor that has yet to be addressed is the possible monopoly the University may gain on internet access. Those students currently accessing the internet from other commercial providers other than the RESNET will be forced to pay provider fees as well as the per minute rate charge.

The fact that students will be responsible for paying for what they use is not the problem, the fact that students had no choice in the decision is the predicament.

After the fact, the Student Government Association has vowed to look into the situation. Morris has also said that he will survey the length of telephone use over the semester in an effort to see if the average phone stays between 10 and 12 minutes.

A solution to the situation may be a compromise between students and the administration. Simply increase the flat fee to 20 cents. This is more than the previous 10 cent flat fee, but less than the 35 cents it costs to place a phone call at a public pay phone. An increase in the flat fee would also decrease the loss of money that SSU carried when the flat fee was 10 cents.

However, in the future, it would be appropriate for the administration to obtain the opinions of students before changing policies that affect them on a daily basis.

Far from home

a weekly look at SSU's international community

Jennifer Martin
Flyer Staff Writer

Katya Yazykova's passion in life is traveling. This 21-year-old senior, from Russia, has visited Germany, France, Poland, and many states throughout the U.S. However, since arriving to America in 1994, she feels most at home in New York City. "You can be anyone you want and do anything you like. New York has changed my life the most," she said.

Born in Moscow, Russia, Yazykova grew up with her parents and older brother, Audrey. Yazykova graduated from high school in 1993 at the age of sixteen. Due to the difficult application process for attending Moscow University, Yazykova went to work as a translator for Gzhel, a company Yazykova described as "the oldest manufacturer of porcelain in Europe."

Since she had taken English classes in high school, Yazykova was comfortable with the language in its written form. "I translated documents and papers, but I couldn't speak the language that well; not until I came to America," she said. Yazykova stayed with the company less than a year. She wanted to continue her education.

Yazykova, who enjoys watching old movies such as "Gone with the Wind," applied to the University of Alaska at Anchorage. In May 1994 she began summer classes and eventually earned her associate's degree in December 1995. Although enjoying her first visit to the U.S., Yazykova said that Alaska was very depressing. "It's dark practically eight months out of the year. And when the sun does come out, it's only for a few short hours," she said.

Yazykova soon transferred to the University of Alaska at Anchorage. She turned her academic interests to business and in the spring of 1996 started classes.

However, she returned to Alaska that summer and soon felt that she had done everything she could do in the state. In the fall, Yazykova enrolled in Hunter College in New York. There, she continued to major in business and received "hands-on" experience with an internship at a local investment firm. Yazykova stayed in New York until the fall of 1997 when she transferred to SSU.

Although she felt most at home in New York, Yazykova wanted to attend a smaller school. "It was my final year and New York was too much for me. I really wanted to concentrate on my grades," she stated. She heard of SSU through a co-worker at the firm she was working with. Finding it to suit her needs, she began classes here last fall.

Currently living in Seagull Village, which she enjoys "very much," Yazykova has continued her love of adventure. She has participated in a few trips with the Outdoor Club including rock climbing and camping. Last semester she worked for Catering Services.

Yazykova, who likes Chinese and Indian food, understands what many Americans perceive about Russians and said, "Russians aren't all old grumpy people. Many enjoy themselves very

Twenty-five years later abortion is still unresolved

Kate Montero
Flyer Staff Writer

When the Supreme Court legalized abortion in the Roe v. Wade decision, many people felt that an end had finally come to the frustration, the turmoil and the illegal back-alley butcher jobs that sometimes resulted in the death of a woman who sought an abortion.

However, this collective sigh of relief was short lived. In the 25 years since Roe v. Wade, the debate has continued to flare in many social arenas, including college campuses such as SSU. Students debate the issue based on fervent heartfelt opinions.

While public favor for legal abortion is at about 50 percent, support has declined in recent years, according to an ABCNEWS poll conducted Jan. 11-13. The poll also showed that abortion is not a black and white issue of either pro-choice or pro-life.

People seem to have a hard time rationalizing any one decision. Many SSU students, both pro-life and pro-choice, place limitations on the issue of abortion to make their decision morally sanctioned.

Junior Christopher Aldridge, a communication arts and physics major, is against the legality of abortions. Aldridge spoke against the popular argument that a fetus is not really alive. "If you're saying, 'well it's not a baby yet', then how can you be pregnant?" Even with a pro-life stance, Aldridge feels that some exceptions, such as cases of violent rape, should exist concerning abortions.

Senior Kelley Moorman, a music major, agrees that life begins at conception. "Any termination of life is murder." However, Moorman said that she does not force her opinion on other people. "We do live in a free country, and it's such a personal decision. It is just that there are so many options - people are not valuing life."

Junior David Diamant, a philosophy major, is pro-choice according to his political opinion. "What is the government doing in people's uterus's?"

Junior Alison Siegel, a communication arts major, feels that abortion should be determined on a case by case basis. However, Siegel, like Diamant, thinks that abortion should be considered a personal issue, not a legal issue.

"I personally would probably be against having an abortion, but I don't believe that the government or anybody else has the right to tell anyone what they can or can not do with their own body," Siegel said.

Darrell Mullins, associate professor of communication arts, said that a controversial debate on the issue of abortion occasionally enters the classroom. "Students tend to be pro-choice, which I find interesting, because as a society I think we've become more conservative," said Mullins.

Siegel voiced a similar opinion, "People think of our society as being very liberal, but in the past five years or so, there has been a wave toward conservatism. I think our country is very divided, and that's why it has become such a heated issue."

Mullins, like so many others, views abortion as a very delicate issue. "My position has shifted over the years.

I feel very unresolved on this particular issue," Mullins said.

Junior Heather Crutchfield, a communication arts major, said, "In a lot of instances abortion is really necessary, especially with teen pregnancy. But, I don't think that abortion should be used as a birth control."

Gloria Nock, family planning supervisor of the Worcester County Health Department, said that newer methods of birth control are giving women more options and greater ability to be preventive. Concerning women having multiple abortions, Nock said that many women say they could never go through the emotional or physical pain of an abortion again.

With such radical changes in the past 25 years, both politically and medically, no one is exactly sure what is to become of the abortion issue. With the pro-life movement making headway, it seems as though a challenge may arise in the future.

Mullins, however, feels that even with the challenges, legal abortion is probably here to stay.

Downstairs of Guerrieri University Center gets a new look

Mike Snow
Flyer Staff Writer

You may have noticed a slight change downstairs in the Guerrieri University Center (GUC) this semester. Not only is the Career Services Office there, but lurking behind the glass windows and doors are the new Seagull Stop-n-Shop and the Office of Student Activities (OSA).

Several organizations and offices were vying for spots in this renovated area, and the Seagull Stop-n-Shop and OSA were ultimately allowed access to the space.

With so many other stores surrounding the campus such as Thirstys, Cheers, Shell and Shore Stop some have wondered about the need for a convenience store on-campus. "The main purpose is to keep the students on campus so they do not have to go to Giant or other places," said Judy Williams, manager of the Stop-n-Shop and a former manager of a high volume Shore Stop store.

Students here can spend their money on anything from burritos to movie rentals. "The Stop-n-Shop is just like any other convenience store, expect we do not sell alcohol, cigarettes or gasoline," said Williams.

Along with Williams, the Stop-n-Shop currently employs 12 students, two of which are assistant managers. Brian Horrell, a student clerk at the Stop-n-Shop, said, "It's a nice place to work. You deal with students so the chances of trouble are slim. For the time being, business has been slow, but it is bound to pick up once the word gets out."

The Seagull Stop-n-Shop is the idea of Director of Central Stores John Yarbrough, who oversees the running of the convenience store. "John came up with the basic plan, not to mention that he also has worked with 7-11 stores. I came from Shore Stop, so we were able to put both of our minds together to create the Stop-n-Shop," Williams said.

"Students still think the Book Rack is here, and when they walk in, they say, 'Oh, I didn't know this was here,'" Williams said in regards to the slow business. The Stop-n-Shop is open from 6 a.m. to 12 a.m. everyday for those who don't feel like venturing across Rt. 13.

The other new area is occupied by the OSA. Joe Oravec, director of student activities and organizations, was the mastermind behind the office. He said, "Instead of calling this area the Organization of Student Activities, it's better to call it the Student Activity Center."

About a year ago, it was decided that there would be some space available downstairs, primarily in the area of the former post office. "This is supposed to be a student-centered campus and where we were currently located, no one could find us," Oravec said, "This space would put us out in the open where students could easily find us."

In regards to how space was allotted, Oravec said, "The three main student organizations were guaranteed space." The Student Government Association (SGA), Student Organization for Activity Planning (SOAP) and the Appropriations Board make up the three primary organizations.

In order to decide which other organizations would be allotted space, Oravec put together a student organization space allocation committee, consisting of several Celebration of Leadership award winners from last year.

Through this committee, space was granted to those organizations showing a genuine need for the space. "People come down here and say 'Oh, you have so much space,' but in actuality, we don't. There is just more people and organizations now in one centrally located area," said Oravec.

The now empty SOAP and SGA offices will be issued to the Multiethnic Student services and Conference Planning Director Ed Vickers. WSUR and The Flyer still remain upstairs, along with Facilities Reservations, Technical Services and other various offices.

Oravec said that the move has been a positive. Mike Depuy, Spotlight Cafe chairman for SOAP, said, "It's much easier to get to and it's more accessible to students." This seems to be the general opinion of the students and faculty that now reside downstairs in the GUC.

The Office of Student Activities is located downstairs in the Guerrieri University Center and is open from Monday-Friday 7 a.m. to 12 a.m. daily and each organization has specific office hours.

Next time you are walking through the GUC, stop in the Stop-n-Shop and Office of Student Activities. You may find something there that you never realized existed.

Emily Argo
Flyer Staff Writer

Each week in Spotlight, Emily Argo ventures out into SSU's hallowed halls of academia in search of professorial profiles.

This week the spotlight shines on Carolyn Stegman, an activist who focuses on issues of racism, intolerance and women's rights including a woman's right to reproductive choices.

Stegman said, "I loathe intolerance. It is shallow and crippling. It is grown out of ignorance and fear. It is a disease which can only be cured through hard work." Through lectures and seminars, she also challenges people to manage conflicts more effectively.

When asked about her impression of political activism on the Eastern Shore, Stegman responded, "What political activism?" Stegman worked to make people aware of issues facing this nation through her column in the Daily Times, which she wrote for six years. Stegman's articles focused on diversity and interpersonal relationships. She addressed such problems as racism, homophobia, sexism, and other intolerance. She said, "Confronting the public about some of these issues has not been all pleasurable; I have gotten a fair share of hate mail."

The Flyer/Courtesy of Carolyn Stegman
Dr. Carolyn Stegman uses the classroom to fight intolerance.

Currently, Stegman is devoting a great deal of time to a book called Women of Achievement in Maryland History. She was hired by a non-profit committee chaired by Frances Glendenning to write the book. It will focus on 300 Maryland women who are living and deceased. Stegman expects the book to be completed in the summer of 1998. After its publication, the book will be placed in every public school and public library in Maryland.

Stegman moved to the Eastern Shore in 1980. She has been working as an adjunct faculty member at SSU since 1987. She has taught for the departments of psychology, communications arts and education. She is on the board of directors for MAC, the center on aging for the Eastern Shore.

Her family has many children including eight "adopted" foreign exchange students from Germany, Russia, Japan, Denmark, Sweden, Romania and Czech Republic. She said, "I have eaten Thanksgiving dinner with chopsticks. Sitting around a table with diverse friends and ethnic food is a major part of my life."

Stegman said she is always looking for creative endeavors, but she likes to keep a foot in the classroom. This semester she is teaching Small Group Communication and a one-credit course in conjunction with Residence Life for Resident Assistants about diversity and conflict resolution.

Stegman said, "I love being in the classroom where I consider myself a facilitator of learning rather than a teacher. Interacting with college students and adult learners is extremely satisfying and motivating."

One of her major philosophies is that learning should be fun. She hopes that students come away from a learning experience feeling better for having challenged themselves and having expanded their capacities.

She believes that some of the same issues that affected her as a college student in the 1960s are affecting college students today. Stegman said, "[I feel college students are faced with] finding significant loving relationships, meaningful friendships, a stimulating career, being able to reduce their conflicts and stresses and wondering how to make the world a better place."

Stegman's long term goals include completing her book, continuing to teach and traveling. She said, "I want to sample every ethnic food that I can and share it with as many people as I can." She also plans to "grow old outrageously."

What's happening? A guide to campus events Wisniewski to be keynote speaker at conference Feb. 21

David Wisniewski, author and illustrator of Golem, the 1997 Caldecott Medal winner and a New York Times Best Illustrated Book of the Year, is the keynote speaker at SSU's Children's Literature Conference 1998 on Saturday, Feb. 21.

The conference, sponsored by the SSU Department of Education, provides educators, librarians and parents with an opportunity to become better acquainted with children's literature through presentations and workshops by a variety of authors, educators, librarians, storytellers and enthusiasts of literature for children. Instructional uses and applications will be emphasized.

Wisniewski, born in Middlesex, England, trained at Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey Clown College, then spent three years as a clown, designing his own props, costumes and gags. He was subsequently hired by his future wife, Donna, as a performer with a traveling puppet theater.

The Wisniewskis started their own troupe, Clarion Shadow Theatre, specializing in shadow puppetry. In the course of creating the plays, puppets and projected scenery, Wisniewski evolved the story-telling techniques and art skills that eventually led to his picture books with their unique cut-paper illustrations.

Wisniewski is the author of three other books: The Wave of the Sea-

Wolf, Sundiata, Lion King of Mali; and Rain Player.

Other presenters at the conference include: Dr. Bruce Foster, Rowan University, "Enhancing Story Understanding Through Writing;" Dr. Kathy Ganske, Rowan University, "Poetry Connections in Reading/Writing Classrooms;" Dr. Jane Sullivan, Rowan University, "Worlds of Wonders Exploring the Genre of Fantasy;" Drs. Debra Thatcher and Starlin Weaver, SSU, "Literature Circles and Cooperative Learning: Creating a Community of Learners;" Larry Points, author, "Writing Photo-Essay Nature Books for Children;" Shelley McCollister, Vienna Elementary School,

"The Writing Process: A User Friendly Guide for Classroom Implementation;" and Cindy Orban, The Country School, "Surfing Children's Literature Internet Sites."

The conference is from 8 a.m.-3 p.m. on the SSU campus. The registration fee of $25 includes lunch with Wisniewski. The registration deadline is Feb. 13.

"Contemporary Art from Ghana" runs until Mar. 13 in Atrium Gallery

"Contemporary Art from Ghana," a collection of carvings by master craftsmen from the West African nation, opened at SSU on Monday, Feb. 9.

The exhibition in the Atrium Gallery in the Guerrieri University Center was organized by Dr. Cyril Daddieh, an associate professor of political science at SSU who lived in Ghana on a Rotary International Teaching Ambassadorship in the summer of 1996.

Located on the west coast of Africa, Ghana is a relatively small country covering an area slightly larger than Oregon with an estimated population of 18 million. Politically, Ghana achieved international acclaim as the first sub-Saharan of black African country to gain its independence from colonial rule in March 1957. It became a destination for African-Americans, many of whom were later to make their home in the country. The most famous of these African descendants includes W.E.B DuBois and George Padmore, who made Ghana their final resting homes.

Ghana is also famous for its varied arts and crafts, some of which are historically associated with particular communities in the country, such as kente weaving, metal carvings or Ashanti goldweights. Through a process of diffusion, many other communities in the country have learned these crafts as well. In Ghana, as in other parts of Africa, art has traditionally imitated the life and culture of the communities in which they were produced. As such, they served a utilitarian or functional purpose. Invariably the function was connected to some spiritual or religious practice. They also expressed the hopes and aspirations, joy and suffering and humor of the people. Such things as masks, statues, religious icons or deities were carved or sculpted for use in religious ceremonies, harvest festivals and other communal celebrations and purifications.

Exhibition dates for "Contemporary Art from Ghana" are Feb. 9- March 13. An opening reception on Friday, Feb. 20 at the Atrium Gallery will feature Daddieh providing background on the exhibition and answering questions. The reception is free and open to the public.

Weekly gallery hours are Tuesday-Friday, 10 a.m.-4 p.m.; Saturday-Sunday, 12 p.m.-4 p.m.; and closed on Monday. For more information please call Salisbury State University Galleries at 410-543-6271.

Roundtable discussions on race relations to begin Feb. 10 at Center for Conflict Resolution

Are you concerned about racism and how it affects you and the world today? If so, the Office of Multiethnic Student Services and the Center for Conflict Resolution would like to offer you a chance for open, honest and respectful discussion of a topic that needs addressing, with or without President Clinton's urging. We would like to conduct a study circle this spring semester and deal with the issue of racism and how it affects all of us. Sessions would be twice a month, Tuesday evenings, beginning Feb. 10 through April 4, from 7 p.m.-9 p.m. at the Center for Conflict Resolution.

Study circles are small, democratic, highly participatory discussions that provide ways for us to build community and resolve public problems. Talk about race relations is commonplace, but the kind of talk that will help us begin to solve our problems requires settings where people from all races and ethnic groups feel comfortable expressing their thoughts. Study circles provide this type of setting.

In order to be effective, study circles necessitate a smaller group, thus we have to limit the number of participants. If it sounds interesting and challenging, please contact Patty Baassiri at the Center for Conflict Resolution, 410-219-2873, or e-mail (<tpbaassiri@ssu.edu>) to sign up or if you have questions or comments. Vaughn White from the Office of Multiethnic Student Services will also be facilitating the discussions.

American Watercolor Society Exhibition on display until Mar. 6

The American Watercolor Society Exhibition, consisting of 40 award-winning paintings by some of the world's foremost artists, opened at SSU on Monday, Feb. 2.

The traveling exhibition coordinated by the American Watercolor Society, founded in 1866, and representing the juried works of an international array of artists will be on display in the Fulton Hall Gallery through March 6. Admission is free and the public is invited.

The newly formed "American Painter in Watercolor" held its first exhibition in 1867. The first catalogue listed 42 active and four honorary members. The tenth annual exhibition catalogue in 1877 featured the first illustrations which were line cuts, made from pen and ink drawings of the actual paintings. By 1890, black and white halftones made their appearance and were replaced in the 1985 catalogue with color photography of all award-winning works.

Weekly gallery hours are: Tuesday-Thursday, 10 a.m.-5 p.m.; Saturday-Sunday, 12 p.m.-4 p.m.; and closed on Monday. For more information, call 410-543-6271.

After graduation this summer, Yazykova hopes to return to New York and work for the same company she did before. Her real dream is to incorporate her love of business and love of travel. With a big smile she said, "I would love to work in multi-national relations while continuing my passion for traveling."

According to an Amway/Junior Achievement survey, conducted by Roper Starch, it's not that students and employers disagree about what traits and skills rate. Preparing yourself for weather's worst

As Benjamin Franklin said, "Some people are weatherwise, some are otherwise."

Ignoring the weather could be unwise in ways that are hazardous to your health.

A heat wave is one way weather fluctuations can be fatal. In 1996, 466 people died in Chicago because they didn't take precautions to avoid heat stroke and dehydration as the temperature rose to 106 degrees. In 1993, in Philadelphia, 118 people died during high temperatures and humidity levels—because they didn't take precautions to avoid heat stroke and dehydration.

Here are hints to help you protect yourself and your family:

- Every day people expose themselves to sun damage by not wearing protective sun screen. Overcast

days are not safe since clouds don't screen out all UV radiation, so it pays to check the UV index and apply sunscreen accordingly.

- During hot weather, drink lots of water. Exercise in the early morning or evening when temperatures are cooler.

- Being prepared for tornadoes, hurricanes, storms, floods and other kinds of dangerous weather could save your life.

- One way an increasing number of families are preparing for weather's worst is with a new home weather monitoring system. The system monitors temperature, humidity, solar radiation, UV radiation, wind speed and direction.

A computer program links the system with your home PC or Mac so you can calculate wind chill as well as temperature and UV index, so you can accurately assess health hazards from the elements.

The Health EnviroMonitor is a home weather system that allows consumers to measure the amount of UV radiation present on a given day. Used on a regular basis, Davis Instrument's Health EnviroMonitor can help you avoid becoming one of the one million skin cancer cases diagnosed each year. The HEM even considers factors such as skin tone when determining how much sun is safe.

The Health EnviroMonitor is also useful for radio and TV stations, day care centers, schools, amusement parks, and resorts wherever health and comfort are a priority.

It's made by Davis Instruments. Founded in 1964, the company has been manufacturing quality weather instrumentation since 1988. The company recently announced new upgraded weather systems with applications for agriculture and environmental monitoring.

Amway, which underwrote the survey, is a national Junior Achievement sponsor because both organizations share the goals of economic literacy and helping students become workforce ready.

The survey shows that only three percent of businesses believe students have a grasp of how business works. JA encourages businesses to become more involved and to find out what they can do for their local schools. Even the smallest business can mentor a child, helping that child to see that there are possibilities other than those in their immediate environment.

For more information on how JA can help your students prepare for the business world, call 1-800-THE NEW JA or write JA National Headquarters, One Education Way, Colorado Springs, CO 80906. Visit the JA Web site at <http://www.ja.org>.

Barfuss put back sends Spartans packing, 73-72

On Campus

Sam Atkinson
Sports Editor

Men's Basketball

The Sea Gulls defeated the Spartans of York College 94-82 on Saturday at the Maggs Center. SSU was paced by Shawn Johnson's 22 points and Will Weston's hot hand from behind the three-point line. The Gull's defense faced a hot Spartan shooter in Johnny Baer who scored more than half of York's 47 first half points. The Gulls played Route 13 rival Wesley College last night in preparation for a rematch against CAC powerhouse Goucher College tomorrow night at the Maggs Center. (Game story this page)

(Game of the Week preview page 16)

Women's Basketball

Freshman Elisabeth Barfuss was in the right place at the right time as she scored the winning bucket off of sophomore's Jessica Latour's missed lay-up with only nine seconds left in the game to defeat the Spartans, 73-72. The Gulls received a game-high 20 points from junior Amy Cooke. SSU sparked an 8-0 run in the last minute and a half in the game. SSU is preparing for tomorrow night's game versus Goucher College. (Game story this page)

Swimming

The SSU men's and women's swim teams were off this week as they prepare for the CAC championships this weekend at Mary Washington College. Two weeks ago the Gulls closed out their regular season at home suffering a double loss to the hands of St. Mary's College. The women lost a tight match 139-123 while the men lost 134-108. (Story page 17)

This was a game that the SSU women's basketball team never gave up on. In the final minute and a half left in the game, the Sea Gulls went on a 8-0 run to defeat the Spartans of York College, 73-72, thanks largely to freshman Elisabeth Barfuss's lay-up with nine seconds left in the contest.

The Sea Gulls, down 72-65, received a key shot from junior Amy Cooke and one point from the charity strip from sophomore Shannon Noon. Then, with under a minute to play, the Gulls received a huge bucket from sophomore Jessica Latour who was also fouled. After Latour converted on the one-and-one bonus, the Sea Gulls were only down by one, 72-71.

The Spartans, coming out of a timeout, took the ball down to the SSU end but lost control and forced a jump ball call in favor of SSU with 23.9 seconds left. Latour drove to the right side of the basket, her lay-up was long but Barfuss, on the left side, was there for the easy put back.

Sea Gulls freeze Spartans in final minutes

Sam Atkinson
Sports Editor

Saturday's game between SSU's men's basketball team and York College featured two teams going in two different directions. On the way up were the Gulls, who brought in their four-game winning streak while the Spartans, on a downward spiral, had lost five out of their last six games.

The Sea Gulls secured the victory with a 12-4 run in the last 3:45 in the second half for the 92-84 victory at the Maggs Center. The Spartans had tied "Jessica drove, and I knew the ball was gonna come off. I just grabbed it and shot it," Barfuss said. Barfuss was the second leading scorer for the Gulls with 14. Cooke led the way with 20.

"This game is gonna go a long way for our confidence and bringing us back up. We really haven't won a close game yet this year," Cooke said.

The Sea Gulls began the game on the wrong foot. In the first half SSU was down as much as 15. The Sea Gulls chipped away at the lead but York would answer with a three pointer or a key lay up. At halftime the Spartans were clinging to a eight point lead, 42-34.

The Flyer/Carl Cooksey

The Sea Gulls came out aggressive in the second half and executed a full court press. With several steals and control of the boards, the Sea Gulls went on a 14-2 run in the first five minutes.

York got back in the game as sophomore Katie Parise stepped up and scored 14 of her team leading 18 points in the second half. The Spartans were able to get easy transition buckets thanks to the SSU press. "The two outside girls just shot back. That was mental because of our inexperience," said SSU head coach Bridget Benshetler. The Spartans also got a big game from sophomore Veronica Byrne who had a double-double with 12 points and 11 rebounds. The Spartans had four players score in double figures.

The Sea Gulls also had four players in double figures. Freshman Lisa Neylan led the way on the glass with 10 boards. The story of the game was the performance by Cooke. As well as leading the team in scoring, she also had team and game highs with six assists and seven steals. She is second in the nation in assists; she averages 7.9 per game.

"She knows how to take a game over. She has played awesome so far this year," Benshetler said. "She is our Most Valuable Player."

The win is huge for the Sea Gulls as they improve to 11-9 and 7-3 in the Capital Athletic Conference (CAC). Coming into the game, the Sea Gulls were one game behind co-leaders Mary Washington and St. Mary's. SSU has four games remaining on their schedule with three at home in the Maggs Center. The first of which is tomorrow against Goucher College at 5:30 p.m. The Gulls in the final four games could possibly take the conference lead. SSU travels this Saturday to Mary Washington College and then close out their regular season schedule at home against St. Mary's next Saturday.

"I'm so proud of them. This is a young team that just took a giant step in understanding how good they are," Benshetler said. "You can come back regardless of the score."

the game at 80 when senior Johnny Baer hit his seventh three-pointer of the game for York. SSU answered with buckets from Shawn Johnson and Paul Kwajafa. York had a final chance with 54 seconds left in the game down by four, 88-84. Sophomore guard Jason Saurbaugh wasn't able to get off a shot before the 35 second shot clock expired turning the ball and the game over to the Gulls.

"We need to learn to play the last four minutes of the game better," said York head coach Jeff Gamber. "The end of the game gets different. You have to make your shots at that point of the game and we didn't. We lost."

The Sea Gulls started out of the gate quick and on fire. SSU, with their fast tempo of up and down the court basketball, forced the bench depleted Spartans to play their game. SSU's biggest lead of the first half was by 14 points when they were up 41-29 with seven minutes left in the half.

The Spartans were able to stay close in the first half thanks to the scoring touch of Baer. He connected on his first four attempts from three-point land in a matter of minutes midway through the half. Baer would add two more threes going into halftime down by

Gulls eye return match with Goucher

The SSU men's basketball team (10-9, 5-5) gets a long-awaited shot at redemption against defending Capital Athletic Conference (CAC) champion Goucher (15-5, 9-1) at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow at the Maggs Center. The surging Sea Gulls will try to erase the painful memories of Jan. 17, when the rival Gophers shredded the Sea Gull defense to the tune of a 36-point second half lead and a 100-81 blowout in Towson.

SSU had won four straight entering last night's non-conference game at Wesley, repairing the damage done by a four-game losing streak that began with the Goucher debacle. After a trying first half of the season, the talented Sea Gulls are finally playing up to their potential. The team's depth is showing up on the court and in the stats, as eight different players have led the team in scoring at least once and 13 players are averaging at least nine minutes per game.

"I thought we'd be better a lot sooner than now," said head coach Ward Lambert of the time it has taken the nine newcomers on the roster to help fill the void left by the graduation of four starters. "But we are definitely a lot better than before."

The timing could not be better with the Gophers coming to town tomorrow. But the biggest test of SSU's improvement will come on defense, where Goucher routinely broke the Sea Gulls' full-court press for layup after layup in the teams' first meeting. Junior guard Bakari Ward torched SSU for 33 points, most of which came finishing off fast breaks. Despite the ease with which the Gophers handled the press, the Gulls have no plans to slow down the tempo.

"Our press is a lot better now than it was then," said Lambert, who recently earned his 400th career victory. "We've got the back end up to the point where we're not giving up easy baskets any more."

"We don't want to play at their pace if we can help it," said Goucher head coach Leonard Trevino, whose Gophers have won three of the past four CAC tournament championships. "We've tried to slow it down, but sometimes you're successful and sometimes you're not."

To win, Lambert stressed the need for SSU to stop Goucher's fast break and shut down its inside game. Stopping Ward, one of the conference's leading scorers averaging 21.1 points per game, is another matter. "He's a super player," said Lambert. "Every time he plays us he has an excellent game. Stopping him will be a key. Hopefully we can hold him to a reasonable game."

Ward, who has scored at least 20 points in nine straight games, and junior forward Tavar Witherspoon give the Gophers an effective inside-outside combination. The 6-foot 4-inch Witherspoon is averaging 16.4 points and six rebounds per game. Junior guard Mike Doyle leads Goucher with 95 assists. Goucher has won five straight after a 72-65 loss at conference front-runner Catholic.

While the Sea Gulls have a number of weapons to choose from, they clearly would not be the same without senior forward George Robinson.

The Columbia, Md., native has been SSU's most consistent force all year, leading the team in scoring with 16.8 points per game. His 5.9 rebound average is second behind Will Watson's 6.4. "Robinson's really tough both inside and outside," said Trevino. "He's really quick. He's developed into one of the best players in the league and the region."

Watson, in his first season with the Gulls, is averaging 14 points a contest. SSU has also benefited from the return of Shawn Johnson, a key ingredient in last year's 25-6 team that advanced to the final eight in the NCAA tournament. Johnson missed the team's first seven games, but he has returned to average 14.8 points. Junior guard Eric Prendeville, among the CAC leaders with 106 assists, quarterbacks the Gulls' run-and-gun offense which scores over 95 points per game.

"Prendeville's an experienced point guard and you can do a lot with an experienced point guard," said Trevino. "They've got a lot of guys who can roll in and hurt you; it's just a matter of who [on any given night]."

SSU has appeared flat and inconsistent at times this season, but motivation will not be a problem tomorrow, when the teams meet for a ninth time with Goucher leading the series, 5-3. The matchup has developed into a rivalry between the two traditionally dominant teams in the CAC. They have combined to win the last four conference tournament championships.

"Both teams are always up for each other," said Trevino. "It's a fun game. There's no bad blood. It's two programs that really respect each other."

The Sea Gulls have a number of intangibles on their side, including the revenge factor and a warm Maggs Center crowd. A win would erase some unpleasant memories from Jan. 17 and give SSU a boost in the race for a home playoff game in the CAC tournament.

Freshman swimming duo emerge in freestyle

Calcaterra prepares for nationals

Brian Burden
Flyer Sports Writer

Three years ago, Jill Stephenson took over as head coach of a neophyte SSU swim team. The women in particular were short on depth and on talent. The desire was there, but the results were not positive. A trend began when Stephenson took over that is starting to place the team in good standing.

"Every year, we try to look for at least one new hot shot that can improve our team right away. This year we got lucky by getting two great swimmers," Stephenson said.

The two swimmers Stephenson is referring to are freshmen Alison Calcaterra and Rebecca Mitchell. In Stephenson's first year, Jen Herzig became a star in the backstroke. Last year, Theresa Piekarski turned heads with her dazzling results in both the 100 and 200 meter individual medleys as well as the breaststroke. This year, Calcaterra and Mitchell are making names for themselves in the freestyle events.

Calcaterra has been dominating the 50 and 100 meter freestyle events while Mitchell's times in the 200 meter freestyle are impressive. Both own individual as well as medley relay records. In a victory over Goucher in November, Calcaterra set a new school mark with a time of 1:00.45 in the 100 meter freestyle while Mitchell set a new school standard in the 200 meter freestyle with a time of 2:12.04. The two also combined with Piekarski and Jen

Mitchell's versatility is undisputed, as she finished in first place in three different strokes: the 100 meter backstroke, butterfly and freestyle in a victory over the College of Notre Dame in late January. The Allen, Md. native competed on the YMCA level as well, both here in Salisbury and in Talbot County.

"I really enjoy a good race and a good, close meet. You can really get into the meets that come down to the wire, like St. Mary's and Goucher," Mitchell said.

"She really brings the team up with her efforts in the pool," Stephenson said. "Her strengths lie in her determination and the skill is just a bonus."

The two swimmers have successfully continued a growing trend here at SSU, and they can make an even greater name for themselves with solid performances at this week's CAC championships at Mary Washington College.

"Both girls are pretty versatile despite the bulk of their success being in the freestyle events," Stephenson added. "Their attitude is easily the biggest reason for their victories. Alison is the type of girl who never complains and is generally very happy while Rebecca's work ethic is unbelievable."

On Jan. 31, the SSU men's and women's swim teams suffered tough losses to St. Mary's College. The meet was also the last home meet for three seniors Tracy Clason, Doug Lloyd and Chris Bembenek. The loss leaves a sour taste in both the men's and women's teams.

"We swam well. I'm sad to see the last meet at home go," said Bembenek. "It's the end of my college swimming career." The men lost 134-108 to the Sea Hawks but did have a few bright spots with first place finishes in the 50 free by junior Jeff Waltz 25.59 and sophomore Dan Hutton who set a pool record in the 400 IM with a time of 5:45.76.

Bembenek grabbed four first place finishes in the 100 and 200 fly, 200 medley relay and the 200 backstroke. Bembenek's time in the 200 back was a pool record, 2:10.80.

"The impact [Bembenek] made has been inspirational," said assistant coach Bryan Gomes. Bembenek closed out his first and only year here at SSU while Lloyd, one of the men's captains, finished a four year career.

The women went into the last two events tied at 113. In the 400 IM St. Mary's finished first, second and fourth as the Gulls took third and fifth. The Sea Hawks would put the icing on the cake with a first place finish in the 800 free relay to win the meet 139-123. The SSU women drop to 5-5 and the men fell to 2-6.

"We weren't planning the meet to be that close," said SSU head coach Jill Stephenson. The women did set three pool records of their

Lambert captures 400th victory, one goal still unfulfilled

Sam Atkinson
Sports Editor

It has been long awaited but SSU men's basketball head coach Ward Lambert finally won his 400th basketball game on Jan. 31 on the road at St. Mary's College. The Sea Gulls edged the Sea Hawks 91-89. The victory snapped a four-game losing streak for the Gulls with their last win coming at home versus Gallaudet University on Jan. 14.

"I'm only interested in winning the game. If it happens to be 400 that's nice," Lambert said. "I've been here a long time. Your bound to win it [400] sooner or later. I won 400 before I lost 400."

Lambert, in his 28th year, is the winningest basketball coach in SSU history with a record of 404-331. Since the beginning of the Sea Gull basketball program there have been only two head coaches before Lambert: Ben Maggs and Deane Deshon. The Wilmington, Del. native coached high school basketball for six seasons before taking the helm here at SSU in 1970.

Lambert has been fortunate in having very talented and successful teams over the past seven seasons but two teams in particular stick out for Lambert. "Last year's team got the best out of their ability. The 1991-92 team had super talent and won 27 in a row. I'll never see that again," Lambert said.

The Sea Gull club last year went 25-6 and lost in the quarterfinals of the NCAA's to Alvernia 89-84. "I thought that team was destined to go to the Final Four, but we ran into a really tough Alvernia team," said Lambert.

In those seven years the Sea Gulls have captured four Capital Athletic Conference (CAC) championships and four bids to the NCAA Tournament. In 1996, the University of Virginia graduate, received CAC Atlantic District and Eastern State Athletic Conference Coach of the Year honors. Lambert becomes the 17th active Division III coach to reach this plateau and only the 23rd all-time.

The 400th victory is not only a big achievement for Lambert but also for his players. "I'm glad for him. He knows what he is doing. It's good to be a part of something like that," said junior guard Eric Prendeville. "I'll always be able to say I was a part of his 400th win."

The immediate future for Lambert is to finish out this season with a CAC championship which would give the Gulls an automatic spot in the NCAA tournament. Currently, SSU is 10-9, 5-5 in the CAC, riding a four-game winning streak going into last night's contest against Route 13 rival Wesley.

"I'm going to be here another two years," said Lambert. With only a limited amount of time left in his coaching career, Lambert does have one unfulfilled goal. "I would like to go to the Final Four one time" said Lambert.

coach Jill Stephenson. The women did set three pool records of their own. Freshman Rebecca Mitchell finished with a time of 2:11.32 in the 200 freestyle while fellow freshman Alison Calcaterra finished first in the 50 and 100 free. Her time of 28.13 in the 50 free was a pool record.

Finally, the last pool record came in the 200 medley relay as the Gulls finished with a time 2:11.62. The 200 medley team consisted of Mitchell, Calcaterra, sophomore Teresa Piekarski and junior Jen Herzig. The women took first, second and third place in the 100 and 200 breaststroke. The team's are currently preparing for this weekend's Capital Athletic Conference (CAC) championships at Mary Washington College. "We would like to finish in third in front of the St. Mary's women's team," Gomes said. "For the men, we would like to be able to place fifth in front of Marymount and York."

NOTES: Bembenek and Calcaterra have qualified for the NCAA's B-cut. This means that if the A-cut is not filled, the fastest times in the B-cut will fill the empty spaces. Bembenek qualified in the 100 backstroke and Calcaterra qualified in the 100 freestyle . . . Bembenek was named CAC men's swimmer of the week.

only four, 51-47. The guard scored more than half of the total team's points for the half. Baer had 25, but would only get one three in the whole second half. Needless to say, Baer lead the Spartans in scoring with 28, which was also a game high and was 7-10 from behind the arch.

"Our defense was good in the first half. We let that kid (Baer) get off a little bit in the first half, but we shut him down in the second half," said junior Eric Prendeville. "I guarded him straight up not allowing him to get open shots."

The second half tempo was a lot slower compared to the first but the Sea Gulls kept control of the game. The Spartans wouldn't let their defense down as they hung with the Gulls until the final minutes. York never had the lead but tied the game several times in the second half.

SSU was led by junior Shawn Johnson who dropped in a team leading 22 points. Sophomore Will Watson had the hot hand shooting the three, 4-5, scoring 12 of his 18 from behind the arch. Sophomore Bernie Dennison controlled the boards with 10 rebounds. The Sea Gulls connected on 10-21 three-pointers as their inside game was minimum.

"We didn't use our inside game at all. We rallied on the outside shot. Fortunately we hit them and that's why we won the game," Lambert said. "I think we learned how to win now. We had very little trouble scoring; we had trouble stopping them."

The win improves SSU to 10-9 and pushed them back to the .500 mark in the Capital Athletic Conference (CAC) at 5-5. The Gulls currently are in fourth position in the CAC. The top four teams in the CAC at the end of the regular season will host a CAC Tournament game.

SSU has four games left after last night's game against out of conference Route 13 rival Wesley College. Tomorrow, the Gulls play host to the Gophers of Goucher at 7:30 p.m. at the Maggs Center. Goucher, currently in second place in the CAC, beat the Gulls last month 100-81.

"It's pay back time. They beat us really bad," Lambert said. "I know we'll do a lot better this time."

For SSU, their five-game winning streak couldn't come at a better time. The Gulls lost four in a row before beating St. Mary's on Jan. 31, which gave Lambert his 400th career win. "Our chemistry is coming together now. If we get mentally smart, I think we are going to be a team to be reckoned with," Johnson said. The change in momentum will help this young ball club in their final four games and could pay off nicely come CAC Tournament time.

The Flyer/Carl Cooksey
Junior Shawn Johnson (22) spots up for a jump shot on the baseline in the Sea Gull victory, 94-82.

NOTES: The loss dropped the Spartans to 4-16, 1-9 in the CAC . . . Baer has led York in scoring in 12 of the past 13 games . . . The four-game winning streak by SSU ties their longest for the season. The Gulls had a four-game winning streak from Dec. 15th to Jan. 3rd . . . The Sea Gulls will face four CAC foes in the next two weeks to close out their regular season schedule. Against three of these teams, the Gulls have already suffered losses from this year. (Goucher, Marymount and Mary Washington) . . . The Spartans continue to lose at the Maggs Center as they have not won here since 1994 with a 85-84 victory.
